Paul McCartney was born on 18 June 1942 in Liverpool, England. When he was fourteen, his mother, Mary, died, and the next year, McCartney met John Lennon and his band. Soon afterwards, the members of the band invited McCartney to join as a guitarist, and he had a close working relationship with Lennon.

Both of Paul and John had talents for music. They liked to write songs. The two wrote most of the band's songs together, such as "Let It Be," "Can't Buy Me Love," and "Hey Jude." Of all the band's songs, "Yesterday" is the most famous one. Many singers nowadays still make a cover version of it in their albums. The band, the Beatles, began in McCartney's home country in 1960. They first visited the USA in 1964 and became popular right away.

During the ten years, they made thirteen albums and two movies, and they held a lot of concerts. After the Beatles broke up in 1970, McCartney continued his musical career with his first solo release, McCartney, a US number-one album. Although the members didn't work together anymore, their music is still popular.

Now, Paul McCartney keeps making music and performing around the world. For many people, he is one of the greatest musicians .
