(一)
Once there was a happy crow. She thought she was the happiest bird in the world. One day, she saw a swan. "I am black, and this swan is white," thought the crow. "She must be happier than me."
The crow told the swan what she thought. The swan said, "I thought I was the happiest until I met a parrot. He has two colors. He must be happier than me."
However, when the crow asked a parrot about this, the parrot said it wasn't true. Peacocks must be the happiest birds because they have more colors.
The crow found a peacock at the zoo. He was very beautiful. "You must be the happiest bird on Earth," the crow told him.
"I thought so before," said the peacock. "But I'm trapped in this zoo because of my beauty. Crows are never trapped in zoos. I wish I could be a crow. This way, I would be very happy."

Scientists think some animals may not be able to see colors. To them, the world is just black and white.

To find out how many different colors dogs could see, scientists first played them a piece of music. The dogs got ready to eat only when they heard this piece of music. Time after time, the dogs never got ready to eat when they heard other pieces of music.

Then this time, the scientists gave the dogs food and they showed them a color at the same time. Every time the scientists gave the dogs food, they showed them the color. So, the dogs got ready to eat when they saw this color. The scientists then showed the dogs another color in the following days. But again, the dogs got ready to eat. From that, scientists found out different colors might be the same to them.

To other animals, like monkeys, colors are not the same at all. For example, if we put food in a red box and do this every day, a monkey will always go to the red box to look for the food. If we then put food in a blue box, the monkey will be hungry for the day because they won't go to it.

26. Different colors could be the same to _____.
(A) dogs (B) monkeys (C) scientists (D) all animals
27. In the beginning, the scientists gave the dogs food every time they _____.
(A) played some kind of music
(B) were having a whale of a time
(C) saw the colors black and white
(D) had a box of food
28. One way dogs are different from monkeys is that _____.
(A) dogs cannot make heads or tails of different colors but monkeys can
(B) monkeys cannot tell colors but dogs can
(C) dogs can see more colors than monkeys
(D) monkeys cannot see red and blue
29. What does them mean in the first line of the reading ?
(A) the scientists (B) the animals (C) the colors (D) the dogs
30. Which is true in this reading?
(A) Most animals are black and white.
(B) Scientists used music before they were able to know how many colors dogs could see.
(C) Scientists played music to help dogs eat well.
(D) All music is the same to dogs.

Dear Angel,

Thanks for your hard work on this report. I am quite interested in your topic - the story of our city. It is exciting when a student does special work to write something different. Many students like to write about easy but boring things. I can tell that you are not bored in my class. I have made a few notes about your report below. I hope this will help you next time.

- I want to know where you found the information. Some of the "facts" in your report are surprising. Did you find them at the library, or did you find all of your information online? Some websites do not always have the true information for you. Please tell where you found your facts next time.
- Although I enjoyed your report very much, it was difficult to read. I didn't understand some of the words and had to read them several times. Next time, please don't write. Do your report on a computer.

Thanks for your great work.

Mr. Peng

Dear Sally,

How have you been? We haven't seen each other since last summer vacation in Japan. I miss you so badly. This August, I visited Yunlin with my parents. Yunlin is a county in western Taiwan. It is famous for its towels. There are lots of towel factories in Yunlin and you can visit them to see how towels are made. There are also many cute products you can buy for your friends as gifts. If you see a cake in the factory, don't bite it right away because it might be made of towels. It just looks like a real one. Hope you can come to Taiwan soon and I can take you there.

Love,

Anny
