The world celebrates the New Year in different ways. In India, for example, people throw colorful powders at each other. We celebrate the New Year by raising the flag on New Year's Day in Taiwan. How do other countries celebrate it?

In Thailand, people call their New Year's Day Songkran. It's on April 13. Songkran is a water festival. People have a water fights. For them, water can wash away bad luck.

On January 1, People in Brazil wear white clothes for peace and colorful underwear for different wishes. Pink is for love, green is for health, and yellow is for money.

New Year celebrations are different from country to country, but they have one thing in common. They mark a new start and bring luck for all.
